INTRODUCTION

THIS is the eighteenth issue of the Yearbook of American Churches, a reference work that has been issued under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America beginning with the year 1916. The Yearbook has been published biennially since 1933.

The Yearbook presents comprehensive information with respect to organized religion in the United States. It consists chiefly of directories. It also contains available statistics.

The largest directory lists the religious bodies in the United States and their officers. The religious bodies that appear are in general those that reported to the Bureau of the Census for the decennial Census of Religious Bodies 1936, published in 1941. The Editor has made inquiries in an effort to learn about bodies that have been organized since 1936.

The field organization directory contains the names of state and local cooperative agencies and their officers. For certain of the major denominations, state officers are also published.

The section on statistics contains the latest information available about church membership and contributions in the United States. These figures are as compiled by the Christian Herald and the United Stewardship Council. There are no annual comprehensive reports of the income and expenditures of all the churches in the United States.

The Editors of this Yearbook simply collect and present, often in brief form, data generously supplied by others. In carrying through the project they have received advice from the secretaries of the Federal Council. They have also received assistance from the staff of the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES

"Jehovah's Witnesses are Christians, people not identified with any sect or denomination. They are associated with the corporations known as the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, Watchtower Bible & Tract Society, Incorporated, and International Bible Students Association. It was the Watch Tower & Bible Tract Society that Pastor Charles Taze Russell and others of Jehovah's Witnesses incorporated in 1884, for the advancement of Christian work and the preaching of 'this gospel of the kingdom' 'in all the world for a witness.'"

"Upon the death of Pastor Russell in 1916, Judge Joseph F. Rutherford became president of the organization and continued until January 8, 1942, at which time he finished his earthly course. He was succeeded as president of the Society by Nathan H. Knorr.

"Jehovah's witnesses are an organized body and have groups in practically all cities throughout the United States, as well as in other parts of the world, for the purpose of regular Bible study. They do not keep a membership roll, nor do they compile any census regarding attendance at their meeting places throughout the world. Jehovah's witnesses meet in halls or auditoriums and do not construct their own church buildings."—From a statement by the President to the Editor of the Yearbook.

Methodist emigrants from Ireland planted Methodism in America about 1760. In 1771 Francis Asbury, one of Wesley's preachers, later a Bishop, landed in Philadelphia. The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1784-85. THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

The largest single body of Christians in the U. S., the Roman Catholic Church is under the spiritual leadership of His Holiness Pope Pius XII. This body dates back to the priests who accompanied Columbus on his second voyage to the New World. A settlement, later discontinued, was made at St. Augustine, Fla. The continuous history of this Church in the colonies began at St. Mary's, in Maryland, in 1634.

III. STATISTICS OF ORGANIZED RELIGION

In this section appear certain of the latest figures about church membership and contributions received by religious bodies.

The latest figures on the total membership of 54 religious bodies in the United States that have 50,000 members or more were compiled by the Christian Herald, New York, and published in its issue for June, 1947. The reports given below are printed with the permission of the Christian Herald.

The question readily arises, "What is the definition of church membership?" In every census and every compilation it is simply that of the body reporting. There are three general definitions of membership: (1) Certain bodies report all baptized persons as members; (2) other bodies report communicants, usually those 13 years of age and over, as members; (3) still others list as members all persons in the cultural or nationality groups served by these churches.

The general practice of the Protestant denominations is to enumerate persons who have been admitted to full membership, usually by age 13. Attempts have been made to secure information about church membership 13 years of age and over. However, many denominations do not separate their figures in this manner, and the data published in the past with respect to the division of membership at 13 years of age and over are less reliable than those for total membership. The Roman Catholic Church lists all baptized persons. Jewish congregations enumerate as members all Jews in communities having Jewish congregations. The tendency of the Eastern Orthodox Churches is to enumerate as members all persons in the United States who are of the nationality group served by the church.

Many religious bodies do not make annual tabulations of their memberships.

Myers, secretary of the United Stewardship Council, Hillsdale, Mich., has made a special compilation of total and per capita gifts to fifteen Protestant bodies for which data were published in the years 1921-1946 inclusive. IV. THE CHURCHES IN AMERICA DURING 1945-1946

ACHIEVEMENT AND OPPORTUNITY

By F. Ernest Johnson

Following are excerpts from a report presented by Dr F. Ernest Johnson, Executive Secretary, Department of Research and Education, to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in session at Seattle, Washington, December, 1946

THE CHANGING SCENE

It seems appropriate at the outset to look briefly at the changing scene in this early postwar period as it conditions the life and labors of the Christian Church. The most significant fact, I think, from a religious viewpoint, is the increasing awareness of the secularization of life. The phenomenon is of long standing, but its significance is now becoming apparent to many of those who contribute heavily to the formation of public opinion. This is reflected in the reports of educational commissions and committees charged with revision of curricula, which indicate a concern for the preservation of our spiritual heritage. The American Council on Education has constituted a committee which is about to publish a report on the Relation of Religion to Public Education. These are signs of the times.

Yet, in contrast to this awareness of spiritual deficit, is the blind compulsion of insecurity which accentuates group antagonisms, intensifies political and economic warfare, and clouds the vision of world order. At this moment we are experiencing the unleashing of forces held in restraint by wartime discipline, which now make a mockery of our ideals and our hopes.

Meanwhile, science and technology stride on with a terrific war-born acceleration, holding on the one hand inestimable possibilities for the enrichment of life, and on the other hand the menace of social disaster.

It is against this background that the church must take stock of its resources as evidenced in contemporary performance. I think we can demonstrate that with all the shortcomings of Protestantism, to which attention is currently called—the very awareness of which is an element of strength—it has a spiritual and institutional vitality that make it worthy of our loyalty.

No inclusive membership figures for the biennium are available but it is probably safe to say that church membership continues to increase. A study of the membership trend between 1926, the last year for which a dependable federal census of religious bodies is available, and 1943-44, showed that the 47 Protestant bodies which had as many as 50,000 members in either or both of those years increased by about 36.5 per cent during the period. The estimated population growth was 17.9 per cent. There is reason to think that the rate of growth has accelerated in the subsequent two years. The Methodist Church reports as of October 15 the reception of nearly 500,000 members on confession of faith as a result of its current evangelistic crusade.

In any case the statistics of church membership today, when compared with the approximately five per cent of the population who belonged to churches at the end of the colonial period, are in striking contrast to the often repeated remarks about the decline of organized religion. The serious fact, of course, is that so large an army should have changed the world so little.

The increase in financial support of church enterprises is a bit exciting. It has just been announced by the United Stewardship Council that 26 Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada contributed nearly $614,000,000 to local church expenses and benevolence during the past year. This is 19 per cent more than the previous high mark recorded by the Council in 1929 and a 20 per cent increase over the previous year.

THE INNER LIFE OF THE CHURCH

Let us look now at the inner life of the church as revealed in current activities and trends. Here one of the most significant factors is the revival of interest in corporate worship. This biennium gives evidence that the worship movement is no mere fad, but that it has struck deep into the heart of Protestantism.

Parallel to the worship movement is the current trend toward the enrichment of church architecture.

Family and private devotional life seems to have increased if one may judge by such signs as the eight-million annual circulation of the Upper Room and the vigor of the New Life Movement. The wide attention given to the issuance of the Revised Standard Version of the New Testament reminds us once more that the Bible continues to be the best selling book.

In their ministry to persons our churches are capitalizing the new knowledge of the art of personal counselling. This development has been greatly stimulated by the impact of the pressing needs of returning service men. Ministers have been availing themselves of the results of frontier work in the field of religion and mental health. An authentic discipline is developing here, which is not mere pseudo-psychiatry. The pastoral office is being strengthened by the work of science without losing its distinctive character. Clinical pastoral training is one of the most constructive of current developments. During the summer of 1946 the enrollment of theological students in summer courses for this type of training was the largest since the movement began.

The week-day (released time) religious education movement is going forward at a remarkable rate. Week-day classes are reported in 2000 communities, with all but two states represented, and an enrollment of over a million and a half. The report, just issued, of an intensive study of a number of these projects reveals elements of both strength and weakness, but definitely upholds the validity of the week-day school when wisely conducted. It is, of course, no solution of the problem of the relation of religion to public education, but it is an extension of the religious education program of the church, enabling it to accomplish more with its children than the brief Sunday period permits.

EVANGELISTIC OUTREACH

By general agreement evangelism is of the essence of the Christian task as Protestants conceive it. It roots in the centrality of the individual person and the significance of personal decision. In some sense the changes in the way these emphases are implemented are a measure of Protestant adaptability. Three significant developments appear to be under way at the present time: (1) toward inclusiveness of the evangelistic appeal, in recognition of the unity of life; (2) toward parish-centered evangelistic endeavor, making the appeal indigenous and sustained; (3) toward lay visitation evangelism, taking the appeal of Christianity into the home and capitalizing in true Protestant fashion the initiative and resources of the layman.

Among the evangelistic Christian "missions" which seem to have become established institutions, the University Christian Mission now comes into the limelight because of the enormous increase in campus populations.

The need for such effort is highlighted by a recently inaugurated project that has had little general notice. During the academic year 1945-46 the Council on Religion in Higher Education, with the assistance of the Hazen Foundation, conducted a notable series of faculty consultations in nineteen colleges and universities. The purpose was not merely missionary, but rather to explore the situation: to learn what recognition is given by faculty and administrative officers to the place of religion in education and to discuss the responsibility of the institutions and their constituent groups in this respect. It was an experimental undertaking but the results were so promising that the project is to be continued.

The extent to which an extreme secularist outlook dominates higher education is not realized by most of us. And, ironically enough, a substantial amount of negative religious indoctrination is done for the avowed purpose of keeping religious indoctrination out of education!

SOCIAL OUTREACH

Because American Protestantism has long fostered a social gospel emphasis and because there has been in recent years a critical reaction toward it in theological circles, a word should be said concerning present trends, as affecting the social outreach of the church. But if one may judge from our current literature, from conference programs, and from the agenda and pronouncements of official assemblies, there is in evidence no substantial recession in social concern. Less sureness about specific social programs there certainly is, but not, I think, any weakening of conviction that the Christian gospel is profoundly relevant to the social order.

The net result seems to have been to correct superficial optimism, to create a new awareness of the Christian's involvement in social sin. There are still differences among us as to the possibility of achieving durable social change, and profound differences as to what the objectives of Christian social effort should be, but the social relevance of Christianity and the duty of the church to challenge every un-Christian aspect of the contemporary world are not conspicuously challenged. Within the memory of most of us the minister was admonished to stay in his own back yard.

I cannot forbear to suggest here that Protestantism has a hitherto unmet opportunity to prepare a specialized ministry to labor and industry. A good beginning has been made in the development of an industrial chaplaincy. The dominant purpose of all such effort must not be merely the recruiting of church membership, but assisting labor and management to discover and exercise their true function in a cooperative, democratic society, under God. It is becoming painfully evident that the matching of economic and political power without individual and corporate discipline on both sides can lead only to social disaster.

In the battle-scarred field of race relations our churches have made an advance during the current year which, if followed through, would lead us into a new chapter in Protestant history. The Columbus declaration denouncing segregation within the household of the church is one of those undeniably Christian pronouncements at which the flesh may rebel but from which the spirit may not recoil without denying the faith.

In the difficult area of economic and industrial relations we are trying to find our bearings again.

The current series of studies on "Christianity and the Economic Order," which the Federal Council's Department of Research and Education is conducting, and the plans announced for the Conference on the Church and Economic Life to be held in February reflect a new emphasis on critical thinking by laymen. Adequate provision for this has not been made hitherto. It is highly significant that active concern for improved economic relations is manifest not only by denominational departments of social education and action but by mission boards and departments of evangelism.

In the fight against alcohol our churches have been taking it on the chin. The current trend is adverse as the nation seeks a spirituous solvent for its troubles and stimulant for its head. In this area the new thing is the cooperative approach now being made to the problem of alcoholism, combining an educational effort to develop temperance and abstinence in disposition and in habit—to keep the man away from the liquor, a sustained effort to secure and maintain a maximum of feasible legislative controls—to keep the liquor away from the man; and a scientific effort to understand alcoholism and to combat it at the personal level. The new Yale School of Alcohol Studies which enrolled last summer over 200 ministers and laymen, many of whom had been nominated by Protestant church representatives, is an impressive achievement in cooperative inquiry.

WORLD OUTREACH

The foreign missionary program has always been a gauge of the vitality of the church and a measure of its zeal, always reflecting a pioneering, adventurous and courageous spirit. The period we have now entered upon is necessarily one of readjustment but our churches can undertake the task tremendously fortified by the demonstrated vitality of the "orphaned missions" and of the "younger churches" which stand as a monument to past missionary achievement. The work of rehabilitating the missionary service in foreign lands has begun with vigor. Hundreds of missionaries, irked by enforced and protracted furloughs, are now leaving for their fields.

The notable work of our churches in relation to the movement toward world order is one of the outstanding performances in modern church history. It would be difficult to find a parallel to what has been achieved in the linking together of Christian testimony and practical statesmanship in an effort to build a new concept of world order and a new kind of political cooperation at the international level. The thinking of churchmen has contributed directly to the planning of the United Nations and to the molding of national policy in relation to it.

Nothing is more impressive than the federation of church efforts for relief and reconstruction in Asia and Europe through Church World Service, Inc. This movement has caught the imagination and loosened the purse-strings of the churches to an impressive degree. The current campaign for a ministry to stricken people in Asia and Europe representing the coordinated efforts of our churches, has enlisted enthusiastic cooperation.

THE CHRISTIAN COOPERATIVE MOVEMENT

With 156 city and county church councils having employed executives and 440 having voluntary leadership, and with inclusive councils operating in 35 states, the new "conciliar" movement is now well established. The principle of inclusiveness—one agency representing all interests—is of prime importance and is worth all it cost to achieve it. The representative character of the councils gives them an authority derived directly from constituent churches or communions.

At the national level the hope for the early creation of an inclusive council of churches has grown brighter in recent months. It now appears that in the relatively near future the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. will be established. This will be an event of historic significance.

In the meantime the relations between the American churches and the non-Roman churches throughout the world grows stronger through the World Council of Churches.

The most recent achievement in organic union in this country is the uniting of the Evangelical and the United Brethren Churches, just celebrated. Among other communions efforts to achieve union continue with many and sometimes trying vicissitudes.

SYSTEMATIC RESEARCH AND SELF-STUDY

A significant development during the period under review is the work of the Committee for Cooperative Field Research. Here is a new type of field-oriented study aimed at strengthening the church's program in specific areas by means of scientific surveys of the communities serviced. Studies thus far completed include a number of centers on the Pacific Coast and the recent study of Brooklyn, which has attracted wide attention.

Further light is being thrown on religion in higher education by a study of college textbooks covering the various disciplines—science, philosophy, psychology, literature, and the rest—to discover the ways in which religious subject matter, when it is encountered in these disciplines, is dealt with—or ignored. The report will be a revealing document.

INTERFAITH RELATIONS

Finally, I am constrained to say a word concerning the interfaith relations of our Protestant churches. Recently the conflict between Protestant and Catholic conceptions of religious liberty has been sharpened. That the roots of this conflict are deep and that the Protestant position is supported by uncompromising conviction no one can question. No good can result from refusal to make explicit the specific implications of the Protestant faith for political life. At the present moment controversy centers upon the issue of federal aid to education. It is not expected that Protestant and Catholic views on this question can be fully reconciled though it should be said that the issue is far more complicated and difficult than most Protestants realize.

As everybody knows, the major obstacle to trustful cooperation between Protestants and Catholics in America is the historic Catholic doctrine concerning the relation of church and state. That doctrine was formulated with reference to what is called in Catholic terminology a Christian state, that is, a Catholic state, which persists conceptually, though scarcely in fact. When Catholics sincerely protest that they do not regard conditions in Spain or in Latin American countries normative for the United States they are handicapped by inability to point to any body of doctrine formulated with reference to a nation in which church and state are constitutionally separate. This is, of course, no business of ours, but it seems only fair to say that what may often seem like distrust of our Catholic fellow-citizens in reality is our inability to accept a historical anachronism.

But it is vitally important at the moment that in defending our historic convictions we keep in mind that there are many areas in which cooperation between Protestants, Catholics and Jews is going forward constructively. The Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion and the Institute for Religious and Social Studies have made genuine contributions to interfaith understanding in the realm of ideas.

At the point of exploration of methods by which better understanding can be achieved, the National Conference of Christians and Jews is making a significant contribution. We have much to learn from our Catholic brethren, especially in the economic and industrial field, and from our Jewish friends with respect to the integration of religion with basic cultural patterns.

In this review and commentary I have touched only high spots, and not all of those. There is in the record enough to rule out complacency, but there is also enough to inspire hope and to make us "gird up the loins of our minds."

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

450 Park Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

The American Bible Society has as its single purpose the encouragement of the wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures without note or comment, and without purpose of profit, to every man in whatever language he may require.

The American Bible Society serves hundreds of missionary societies and church bodies in the United States and abroad. Its supreme concern is to get the Bible into the hands of those who do not have it in such a manner as to secure serious interest and receptive minds.

It aids translators by counsel, supervision, and contributions toward expenses in projects continuously going on in various languages.

Long experience with skilful supervision results in the publication of readable and durable Scriptures at low cost. In recent years printing orders have reached more than ten million volumes of Gospels, Testaments, and Bibles per year. Centers of publication include London, Glasgow, Beirut, Cairo, Bangkok, Manila, Shanghai, Chengtu, and Tokyo, as well as cities in the United States.

The Society's own staff distributes hundreds of thousands of Scriptures. Many more go out through Christian workers, pastors, missionaries, and evangelists.

Efforts are made to secure a wider use of the Scriptures by various methods including a special reading campaign from Thanksgiving to Christmas and promotion of Universal Bible Sunday in the midst of that period.

The world never needed the Bible as it does today and there were never more people asking for it. If the millions of China, Latin America, and elsewhere are to get the Scriptures the American Bible Society must assume the principal responsibility.

The Society is supported by voluntary contributions and looks to the churches for its main support. Does your church give?

NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY

In New York City with its vast population of many nationalities, the workers of the New York Bible Society go about their appointed tasks looking after the spiritual needs of the multitudes by circulating the Scriptures to all who will receive them, and in their own language.

The record of the society in distributing the Scriptures during 1946 was— Sales. Bibles, 9,839; Testaments, 11,299; Portions, 324,579, Total, 345,717. Free Grants: Bibles, 9,716; Testaments, 25,006; Portions, 293,521; Total, 328,243. This brings the number of Bibles and Scripture Portions distributed in the entire history of the society to 29,483,263.

The work of the society with the Word includes the following:

Marine: Two workers for both shores from the battery to Edgewater. One worker for the ships along the East River and Brooklyn

Immigration: One agent meets the incoming aliens and deportees, working at Ellis Island and at the steamship piers

Hospitals: Two women visit the wards daily in forty-six hospitals.

Hotels: Bibles are kept in the transient rooms of the 428 New York City hotels.

Blind: One young woman, blind herself, works among the city's 7,000 sightless.

Colored: A depository is maintained in Harlem, with two colored workers for the nearly 300,000 peoples of their race

Foreign: Three Italian ministers work among a million of their countrymen. One Polish and one Russian minister visit among the East Side multitudes. One Spanish and one American work among scattered populations

Jewish Work: One Christian Jew works among the thousands of his race in the great mission field of New York Staten Island: One minister serves that field across the bay of nearly 200,000.

The city's multitudes and the millions of visitors present a challenging opportunity for the moral and religious reinforcement brought by the Bible. For fuller information write for free literature describing the work.

PURPOSE: to enable the medical missionaries of all Protestant Boards of Missions to care for and, when possible, to cure people with leprosy.

The Mission is the recognized auxiliary for this special ministry of all the Boards, denominational and non-denominational. These Boards, as a rule, make no appropriation for the maintenance of leprosy work but rely on the Mission for the support of their own work of this kind. The service of leprosy patients is equally physical and spiritual, the two inseparably joined as they were in the life of our Lord. The missionary leprosy colonies are Christian communities in which forsaken and lonely people find the love of God through the love of men.

"Carillon Bells"

...CHOICE OF
MODERN CHURCHES
FOR ITS VOICE OF
MATCHLESS BEAUTY

Your tower comes to vibrant life, your church acquires a new voice in the community, through the incomparably clear, rich tones of CARILLONIC BELLS. Nearly seven hundred churches have proven this instrument the finest of its kind for sending forth a message of beautiful music.

And if you are planning a church, be sure to have CARILLONIC BELLS built in. With no weight factor nor awkward size to consider, you can save money on tower construction, and the design can be as beautifully slender as your architect desires.

Whether played from the tower, or inside with the organ, CARILLONIC BELLS adds new color and greater spiritual appeal to your church music; and you will be surprised at the increasing numbers of worshippers it attracts. For particulars, address Dept. J-1.

Mightier Than a Machine

... the hand of an Artist

Each Möller organ is custom-made, with the visible and tonal distinctions of hand-wrought beauty. Experts, not machines, supervise and fashion every phase of Möller construction. In design, selection of materials, in carving, pipe making and voicing, Möller confides its characteristically fine details to the living, feeling, sensitive artistry of master-craftsmen.

That is why each Möller organ is a work of art, triumphant proof that the inspired skill of an artist works wonders beyond the powers of a machine.
